

International Public Safety Association Releases New InfoBrief: Tactical Emergency Casualty Care vs Tactical Combat Casualty Care

Goodyear, Arizona – May 30, 2018

The International Public Safety Association is pleased to announce its release of its latest InfoBrief for first responders and health care professionals, Tactical Emergency Casualty Care vs Tactical Combat Casualty Care.

TCCC and TECC guidelines continue to evolve in parallel to improve battlefield and tactical prehospital medical care, respectively. What follows is a succinct review of the latest updates in the TCCC guidelines and how these trends in military medicine may translate into the civilian trauma systems of care paradigm. For purposes of consistency, this InfoBrief examines the major changes and presents highlights in the three phases of TCCC/TECC and in keeping with the established M.A.R.C.H.E. format (Massive Hemorrhage, Airway, Breathing/Respirations, Circulation, Head & Hypothermia and Everything else).

Regardless of the setting, military, SWAT or purely civilian EMS, trauma care and evacuation will always have barriers. Today's EMS providers must learn to work around those barriers and provide the best care possible. This will be done with education, practice and tenacity.

The world continues to be a violent place and those front line medical providers continue to expand and improve as the lives they save, build our worlds foundation.
